DESCRIPTION

A close reading of the Life of Archpriest Avvakum, written by himself, with linguistic analysis concentrating on the expression of definiteness. The 17th century manuscript is the work of the leading figure of the Old Believers revolt that was caused by the schism in Russian Orthodox church after Patriarch Nikon's reforms. The Life, while written in the traditions of hagiographical genre, possesses many features of Avvakum's native dialect, thus approximating colloquial speech. It has attestations of the post-posed particle that resembles the definite article in other Indo-European languages, such as English and French. Both originate in demonstrative pronouns. Since contemporary standard Russian does not have a separate part of speech that serves as a marker of definiteness, it is instructive to examine this phenomenon in the language of Avvakum.

OBJECTIVES

The course aims at enabling the student to produce a linguistic description and analysis of the written historical source, to compare its usage and grammar to that of modern Russian; to create an inventory of dialectal features found in the language of the author, to test the hypothesis that the particle marks definiteness; to review the secondary literature on the subject of definiteness; to lay the foundation for the future work on the language of Old Believers who reside in Northern Alberta, if such opportunity ever presents itself.

OUTCOMES

The student will be able to understand and analyze the text from a linguistics point of view, to parse the relevant forms focussing on the particle correlated with definiteness. The data collected in the process of reading the primary source, the knowledge and the research skills acquired during the course will all contribute to the final paper. The experience gained in the course will strengthen the student's ability to perform independent work in the future.

COURSE NOTES

ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

1. Plagiarism is a serious offence, the penalty for which is an F on the assignment and possibly also an F in the course, academic probation, or requirement to withdraw. Plagiarism exists when:

- a) the work submitted or presented was done, in whole or in part, by an individual other than the one submitting or presenting the work (this includes having another impersonate the student or otherwise substituting the work of another for one's own in an examination or test);
- b) parts of the work are taken from another source without reference to the original author;
- c) the whole work (e.g., an essay) is copied from another source, and/or
- d) a student submits or presents work in one course which has also been submitted in another course (although it may be completely original with that student) without the knowledge of or prior agreement of the instructor involved.

While it is recognized that scholarly work often involves reference to the ideas, data and conclusions of other scholars, intellectual honesty requires that such references be explicitly and clearly noted."

Plagiarism occurs not only when direct quotations are taken from a source without specific acknowledgement but also when original ideas or data from the source are not acknowledged. A bibliography is insufficient to establish which portions of the student's work are taken from external sources; footnotes or other recognized forms of citation must be used for this purpose.

2. Cheating at tests or examinations includes but is not limited to dishonest or attempted dishonest conduct such as speaking to other candidates or communicating with them under any circumstances whatsoever; bringing into the examination room any textbook, notebook, memorandum, other written material or mechanical or electronic device not authorized by the examiner; writing an examination or part of it, or consulting any person or materials outside the confines of the examination room without permission to do so, or leaving answer papers exposed to view, or persistent attempts to read other students' examination papers.

3. Other academic misconduct includes, but is not limited to, tampering or attempts to tamper with examination scripts, class work, grades and/or class records; failure to abide by directions by an instructor regarding the individuality of work handed in; the acquisition, attempted acquisition, possession, and/or distribution of examination materials or information not authorized by the instructor; the impersonation of another student in an examination or other class assignment; the falsification or fabrication of clinical or laboratory reports; the non-authorized tape recording of lectures.

4. Any student who voluntarily and consciously aids another student in the commission of one of these offences is also guilty of academic misconduct.
